Numbers/cupcake Flash Cards

數字/杯子蛋糕 閃卡

Cards with Chinese characters, numbers and pinyin (30)
Cards with Chinese characters and cupcakes (30)

Directions

1. Chinese numbers are easy. If you can count numbers in Chinese from one to ten you can count all the way to ninety-nine. So, it is very important to learn how to count from 1 to 10 first! All the rest is the combination of the ten numbers. Older students should know about this rule. For example:
"Eleven" in Chinese is read as "ten one."
"Twelve" in Chinese is read as "ten two."
"Twenty" in Chinese is read as "two ten(s)."
"Twenty-five" in Chinese is read as "two ten(s) five."
"Eighty-eight" in Chinese is read as "eight ten(s) eight."
2. To start teaching the numbers, just use the first 10 cards with numbers (1-10) and the first 10 cards with the cupcakes (1-10).
3. When students are familiar with the number 1-10. Play Match Game (1-10) with the number cards and the cupcake cards.
4. Increase 5 or 10 numbers each time to count all the way to 30.

Number Relay

數字接力 | 数字接力

Shù zì jiē lì

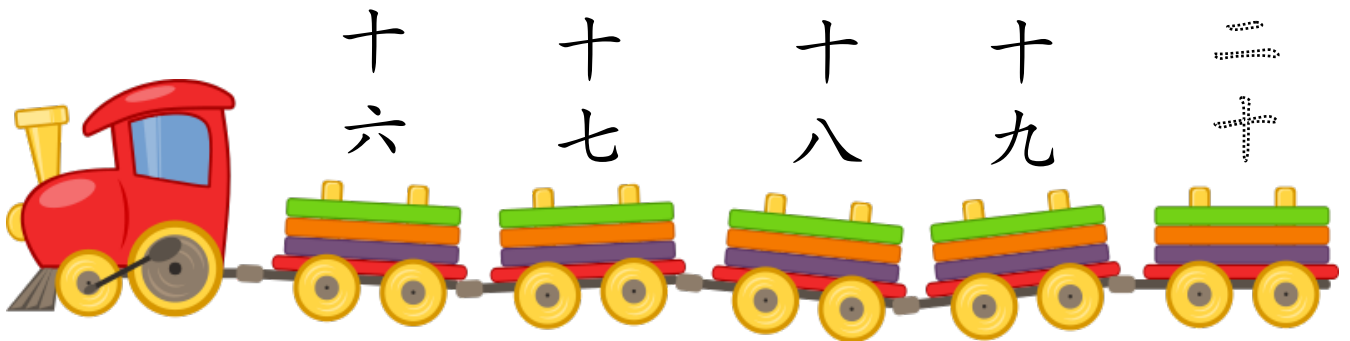

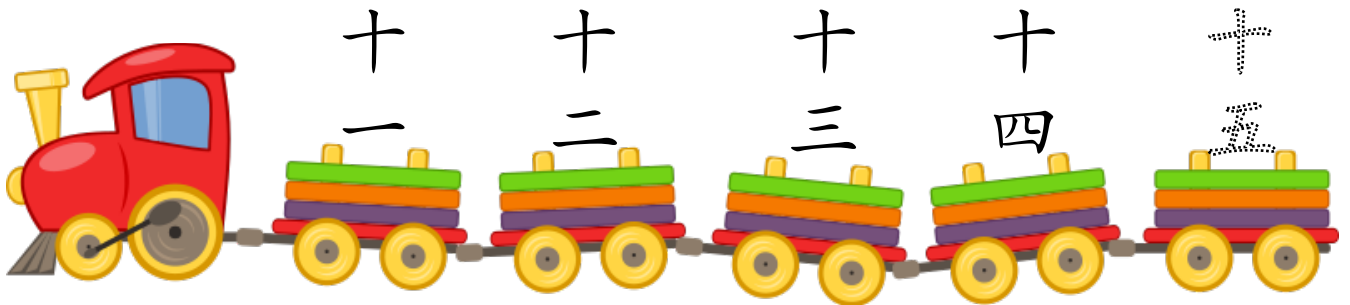

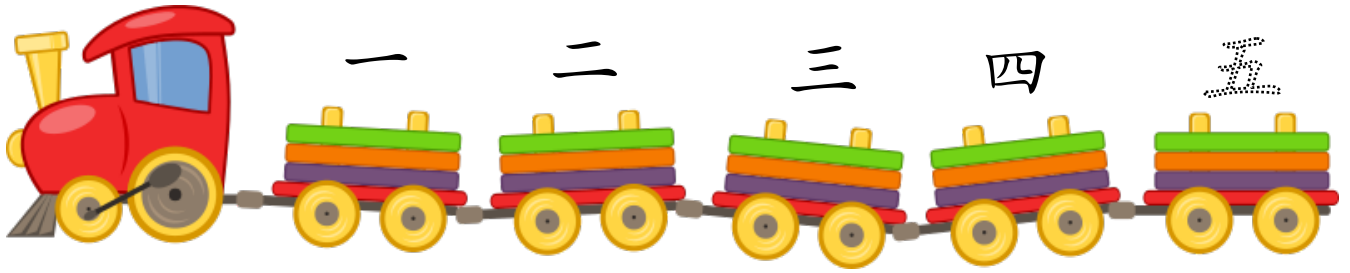

- Let's count the number of train cars! Trace the numbers, fill out the numbers, and do the number relay!
- Count the cupcakes. Cut and paste the numbers to cupcakes.

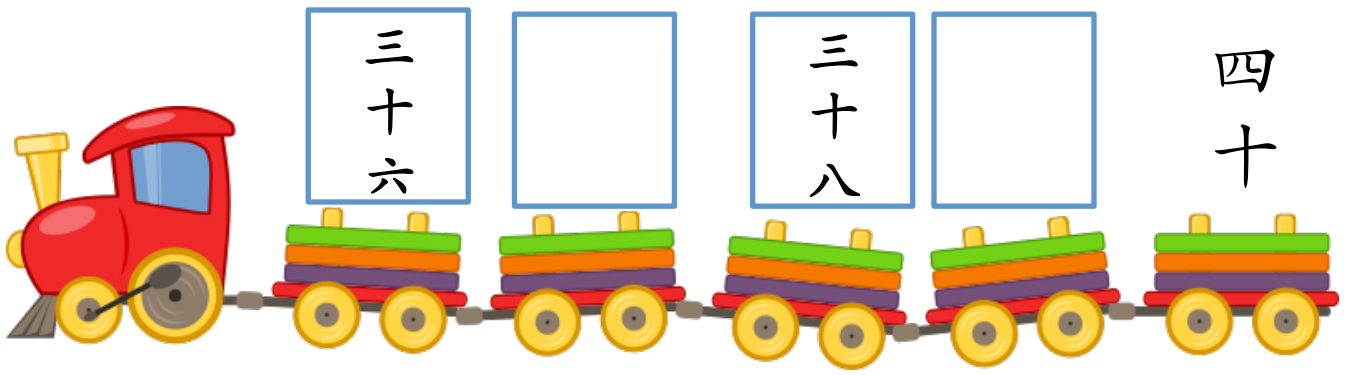

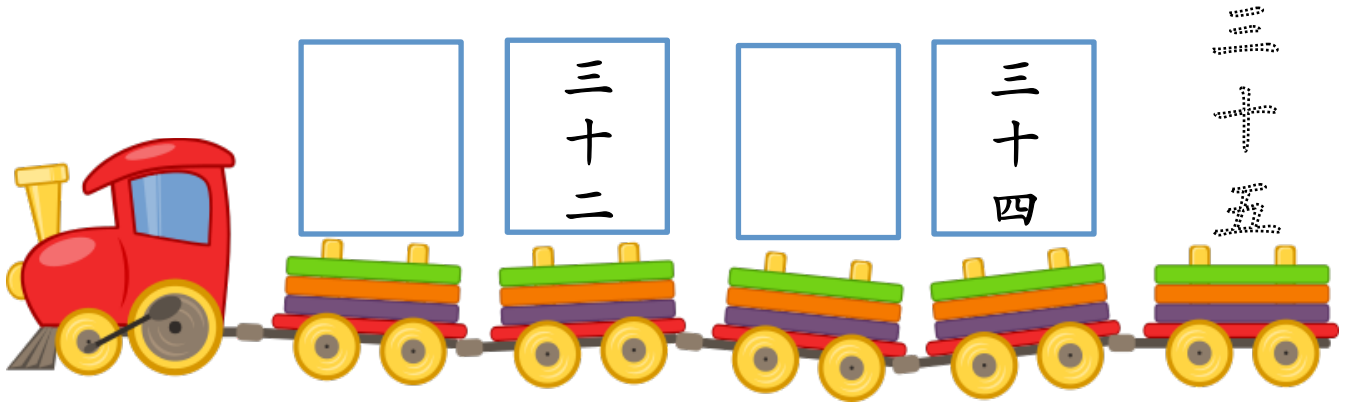

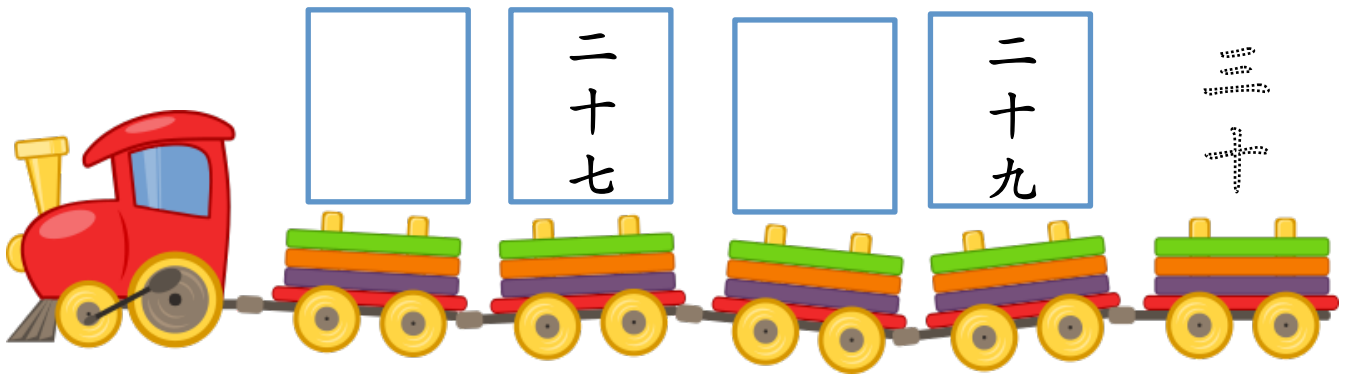

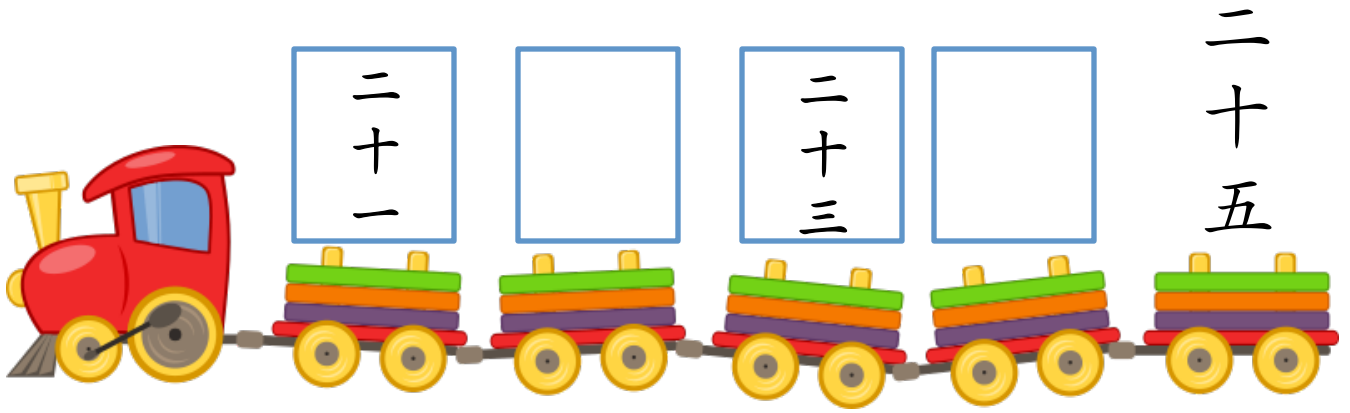

Directions

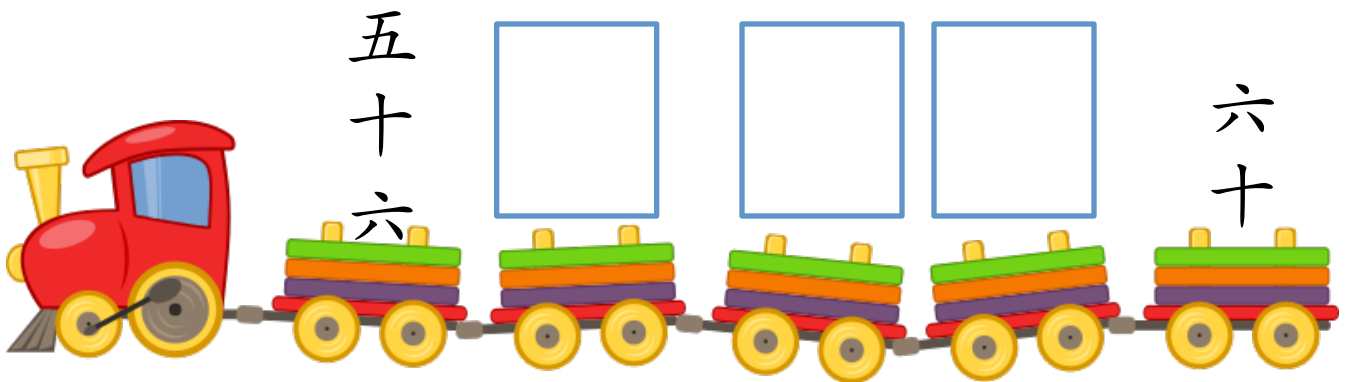

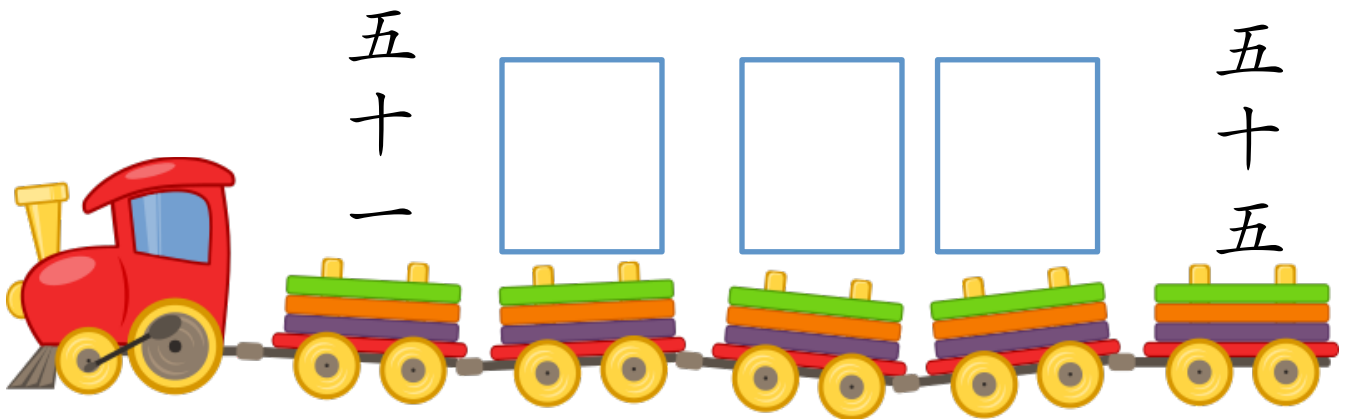

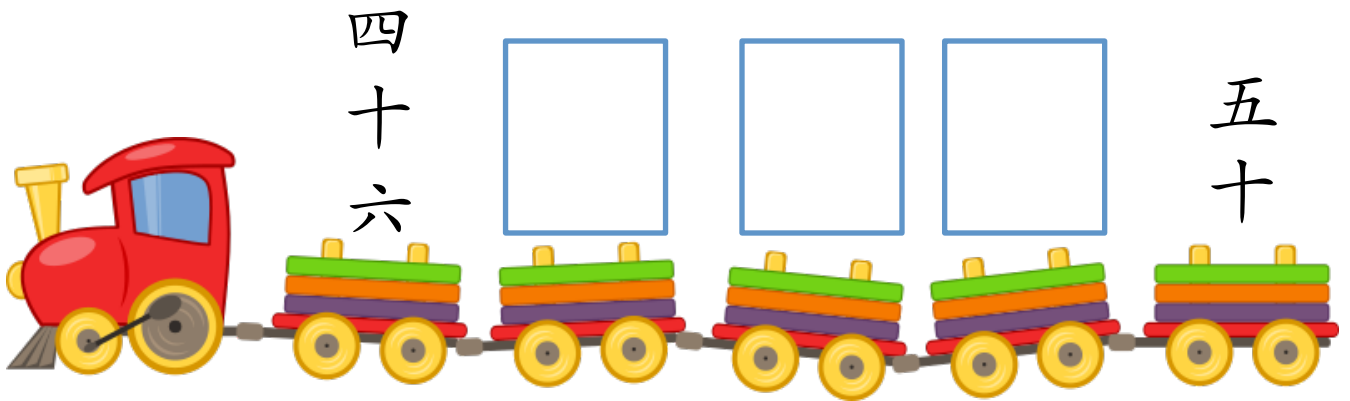

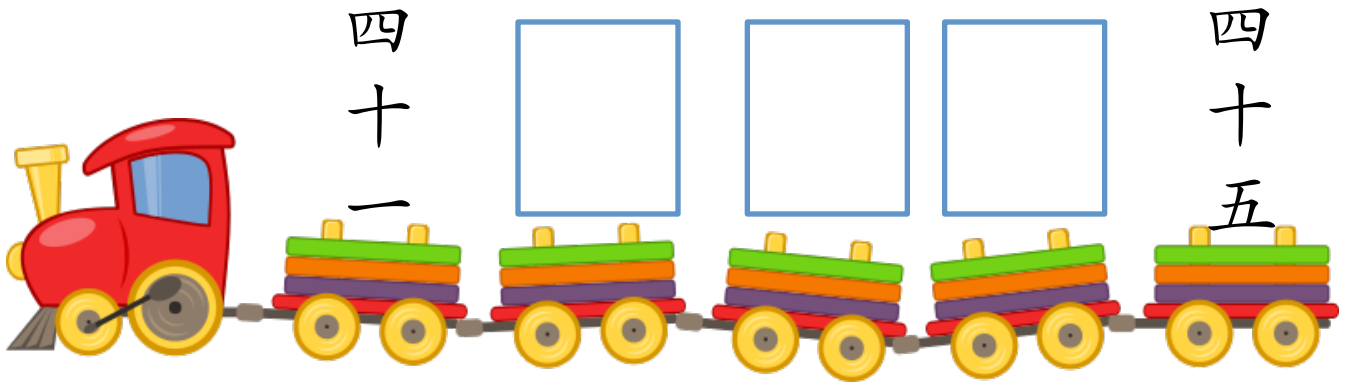

1. Count the number of cars in each train.
2. Trace the numbers, fill out the car numbers, and do the number relay.
3. Reinforcement activities: Cut and paste the trains, display the trains on the floor. Roll the dice and find the number(s) on the train. Number relay (counting) with the numbers on the trains with partners.
4. Count the cupcakes.

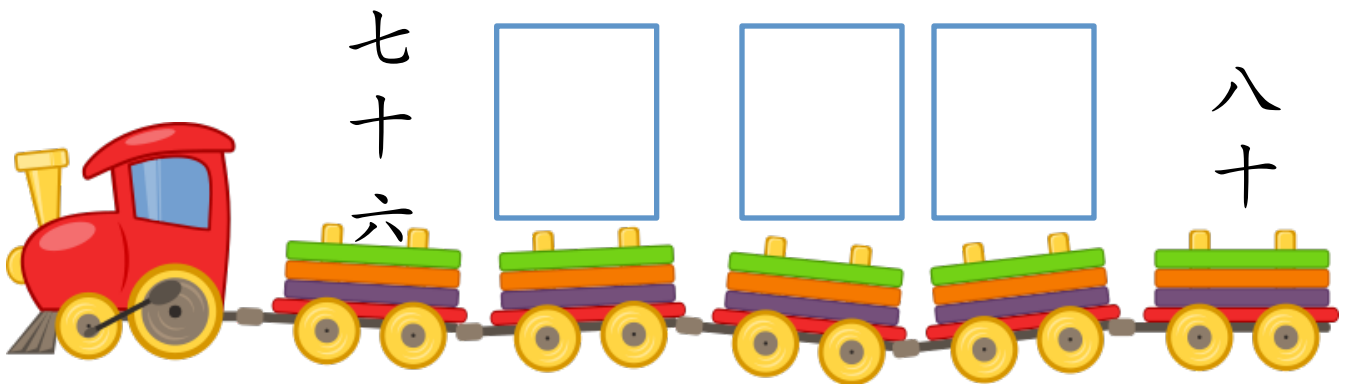

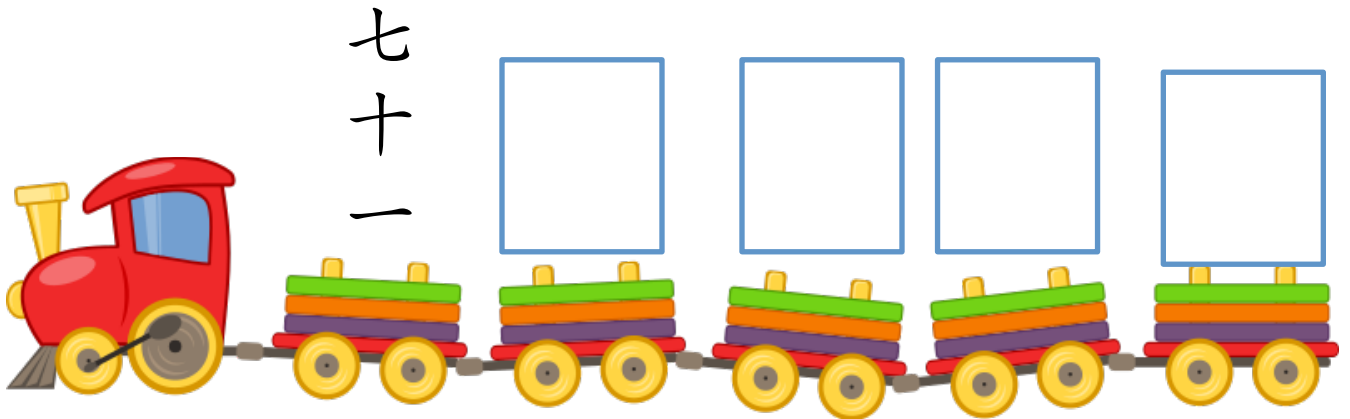

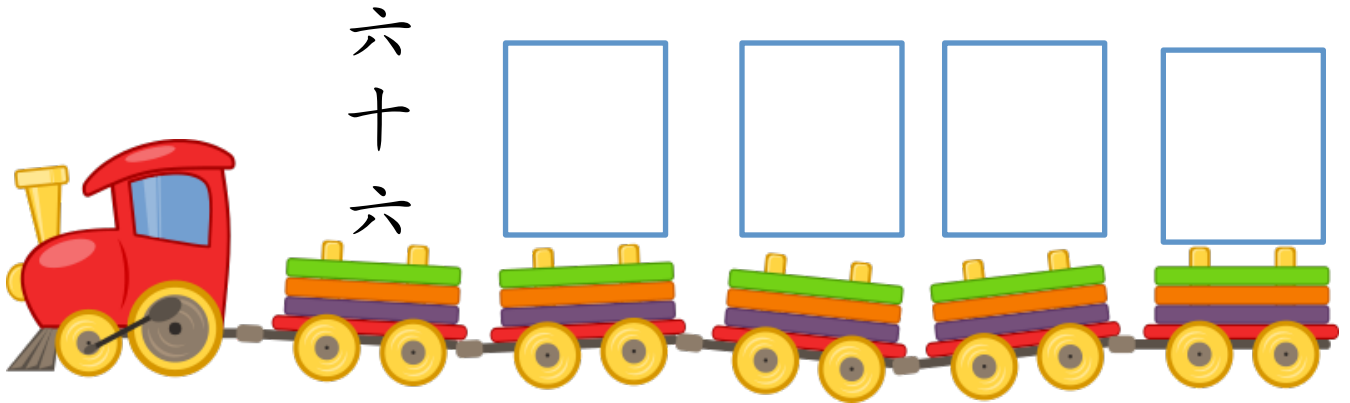

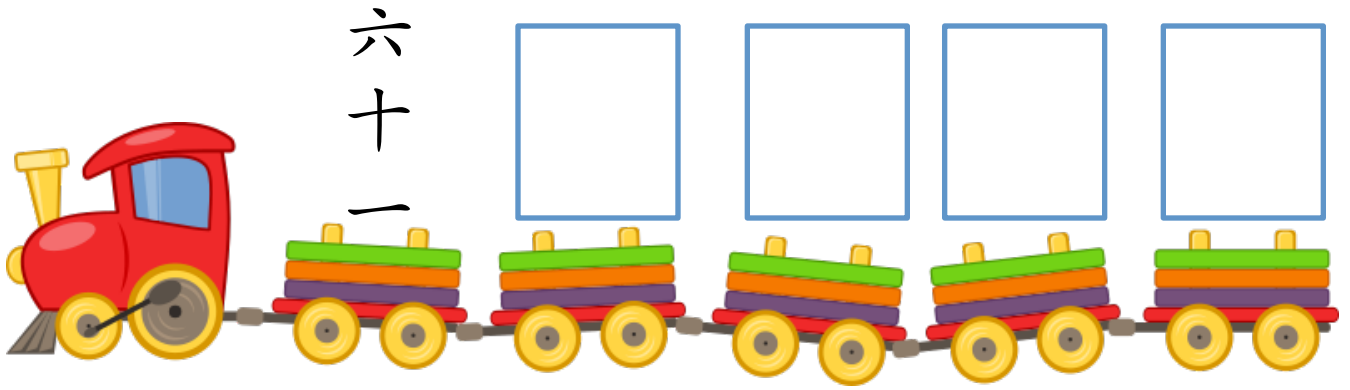

Note: Two (2) is èr (二) in Chinese when we count the numbers. However, when we say “two monkeys” we will say liǎng zhī hóu zi. 兩 (liǎng) also means two, and is often, but not always, combined with a counter/measure word.

Examples: 2 days = 兩天[两天] = liǎng tiān;
2 pens = 兩支筆[两支笔] = liǎng zhī bǐ;
2 children = 兩個孩子[两个孩子] = liǎng gè hái zi.
